SOMEBODY'S BOY.

BY BARTON K. BRISCOE.

Is somebody's mother thinking
That somebody's boy gets "tight,"
While somebody's boy is drinking
Somewhere or other to-night?

Who was that somebody lugging
To heavy a load to-day
Of brandy and rum, and hugging
The posts on the corner, eh?

Who is that handsome fellow,
The handsomest face we meet,
Who comes home so late and so mellow
He can scarcely keep his feet?

Who is that somebody reeling
First from the left to the right,
With empty pockets, yet feeling
As rich as Croesus to-night?

Ah! pavements have grown unsteady;
They wave like a wind blown sheet,
And have interfered already
With somebody's drunken "feet."

And still to the world his drinking
Is neither here nor there;
But somebody's pa, I'm thinking,
Or sister or mother would care.

He'll wake to-morrow, it's patient,
And he'll come down stairs all right,
And look almost if he hadn't
Been out on a "tear" last night.

And somebody's mother and sister,
When told that brother gets "tight,"
Are almost inclined to blister
Your cheeks with their hands outright.

But somebody's sins are wearing
The jewel of life away;
And somebody's boy wayfaring,
Will die on the street some day;

The "Sweeping Brigade."

"Invisible," the Harrisburg correspondent of the Blair County Radical, thus writes of the "sweeping brigade":

The "sweeping brigade" is one of the institutions of the Capitol. It numbers sixty women, divided into three companies of twenty each—ten for each house—and each does duty two evenings a week. At precisely six o'clock each week day, high up goes the large windows and in rushes the keen, bracing air of the Susquehanna, penetrating every nook and corner of the chambers and committee rooms and admonishing the tardy legislator to look his desk and vacate the premises instanter. Then, with mop and broom, cloth and brush, the charge is made. One platoon pierces the centre of the one hundred and fifty-seven spittoons, another keeps an enfilading fire with sand and soap upon the unpretending, unoffending funders that stand picket between legislative coat-tails and the material fire of the hickory back-logs behind, and another, still, captures the little williams and unhatched snakes that have carelessly found their way outside of desk locks to the floor. The avalanche of little bits of paper, segar stumps, peanut shells, apple cores, bits of cake, (for legislators, as old Abe Lincoln once said of Presidents, "are only men after all," and have more stomach than brains,) and so forth, that rolls down the main isle, proclaim the brigade more than mistresses of the situation. This sweeping process lasts one hour and costs the State fifty cents apiece for each woman, or $10 a night.

The contests for these little crumbs are often fought with an earnestness similar to the masculine tilts for the higher positions; and on the evenings the two Chief Clerks make the selections (usually about the middle of the first week,) the excitement in the Rotunda among the applicants and their children, often equals that of the sternor crowd awaiting a caucus deliberation. I have often looked on as the sweepers were announced, and pitied in my inmost soul many who have been disappointed. For there are many deserving women who fail at each annual selection, but through no fault of the Clerks. It may seem strange to the Radical's readers that Clerks should be importuned night and day by applicants and even Members, for positions worth but a dollar per week; but your readers are more familiar with the manufacture of iron and the growing of wheat than the wiles of the legislature. Many, many, ask employment only for the little pittance—others, for other purposes. To some the hour's service is life to a helpless family of nearly starving little ones as dear to the mother as life itself—to others it is an introduction, an advertisement. Their history is not briefly told. In many cases it is the old story Some work in the cotton factories during the day time; some have no other visible means of support; some are married; some not; some widows; some, "war widows"; some, old and wrinkled and haggard; some, young and comely to look upon. To virtuous ones, sweeping there is the last resort. Strong drink and desertion has driven many a noble wife and mother to ask labor from the State. Could we but read the heart-histories of the women who dust the desks of the lawmakers, what a picture would we behold!—God is merciful in keeping us finite.

Compulsory Attendance at School.

The following remarks were made by Mr. S. D. Caldwell, a teacher from Morris, at the recent session of the County Institute:

MR. PRESIDENT—FELLOW MEMBERS: Sensible of the honor conferred upon me I rise to cast into the scale of Public Opinion my slight influence in favor of a law compelling children to attend school.

Conscious of the fact that many, very many voices are against it, I appear as its advocate, believing that such legislation would be both just, and beneficial to the youth of our land.

It is but justice to them that they should be educated, and if they in their ignorance prefer to remain away from places of instruction, and their parents in their foolishness, allow them to do so, I say it is the duty of those who are entrusted with the care of our country to provide a law for such an exigency. When we notice how small a number of the youthful portion of our population attend school, the necessity for such a law becomes at once apparent.

Some object to a law of this kind because it would exercise, or seem to exercise too much authority over their children.

In answer to this objection, serious as it may at first appear, I would simply say, that the parent who is doing his duty toward his child, by sending him to shool, will not consider such a law as usurping his authority, and as for those who are nor doing their duty, in this respect, toward the children God has given them, it is about time some one else was doing it for them.

If a parent shows himself incompetent, or unwilling to direct his offspring aright—if he appears satisfied to let them wrap ua their talents in a napkin and turn them down into the earth with a plow—it is time some one was speaking for his defenceless and innocent children. And who, or what can do this more effectually and decidedly than can a law of our country?

Some one will say, "I had to stay at home when I was young and work, instead of sitting at my case in a school room—and I do not intend that my children shall fare any better in this respect than I did."

I have often heard men talk in this strain and a peculiar absence of intelligence is always displayed, when we hear persons talk after this fashion.—Men who would barter away their children's happiness for the sake of amassing a little more wealth—who would deprive their children of an education, merely because they can save a few more dirty, greasy dollars, or because they themselves were so unfortunate in youth as to be deprived of such an opportunity. I say men who could so far forget their duty to—and be guilty of such base conduct toward the children God has given them, are, to use the mildest term applicable, ignorant and unworthy the gift of a child, much less absolute authority over one.

Gentlemen, the time has passed when an ignorant, honest nation can stand. We must have an intelligent, and a very intelligent people to decide the great and intricate questions which will rise ere many years have passed over the head of this people; and if an intelligent people we must have, to preserve the gift of our forefathers from dissolution and ruin, shall we allow misguided, ignorant, and over-indulgent parents to mould the minds of the rising generation?

It is, I repeat, into the hands of an intelligent and learned people we wish to hand over the reins of this government, when we—I mean the present generation—"shall shuffle off this mortal coil."

The "signs of the times" are unusually significant, and indicate a time in the future when hard and difficult problems will be given this nation to solve,—and God grant that the American People, who claim to be a far-seeing nation, will prepare the heads of our young people—who are destined, in future time, to guide our "Ship of State,"—to grapple with, and cut successfully the Gordian knots which will fall to their lot to untie. And how can the legislators of our nation more effectually secure this end, than by passing an ordinance which will ensure the regular attendance of Young America at School?

Although the number of those children who do not attend school, is large in the country, it is still larger in our cities. Take Philadelphia as an example. What proportion of the juvenile population of that city attend places of instruction regularly?

Speaking from the number I have seen upon its streets during the day, I would suppose about one-half of them attend. The other half belong principally to the boot-black, newsboy, rag-picker and ragamuffin brigades. They pick up their education upon the street; and what an education! Few Persons have an idea how thoroughly depraved and wicked those little friendless urchins become. Motherless—fatherless—a great many of them; and all we might say, friendless, with no one to guide or direct them aright—no one to see that they ever have a chance to rise above the degraded sphere in which they move. How grateful would a great many of them be, had we a law which would say, peremptorily, you SHALL be educated. Such a law would lead to the establishment of a greater number of benevolent institutions than we now boast of, and would in this one particular be a God-send and a blessing to many a poor and friendless waif.—If such a law should be added to the already large number of good, and beneficial school laws we now enjoy it would have to make provisions for certain cases wherein it would be impossible for some to obey it in order that it might go into general effect—I honestly believe that such an ordinance would lead to many a wise reform in our present school system. It would lead to the founding of many a philanthropical institution, for the education, and consequent moral elevation of the young America of our land.

Foolishness of Intemperance.

BY "BRICK POMEROY."

The habit of liquor drinking is, to our mind, the most foolish, inexcusable piece of destructive nonsense in the world. And nowhere is it more prevalent than in cities. The money poured down the throats of men each year is greater than the amount spent for improvements. Whiskey-shops, saloons, gin-mills, beer-cellars, wine-rooms, and all sorts of irrigational devices and places to fool away money, are found by the hundreds and thousands in cities. If a man is tired, he drinks. If doing nothing, he must have a nip each hour. If too warm, he takes a mint julep. If too cold, a hot whiskey. If he is by himself, out comes a flask or bottle. If in company, he stands treat till his money be gone, then, like a dead beat, sits around till some one asks him up.

A man on moderate salary steps into a saloon, invites half-a-dozen friends to drink, pays half a dollar or more, and walks on. Three or four times a day he repeats this, and always drinks when asked. It is social. Men mean nothing by it. But during the week half a man's salary is poured down his throat, destroying his stomach, weakening his nerves, over-exciting his brain, robbing himself and family of money needed for other purposes. But it is social! Drink in the morning—at noon—at night—and then a few times between drinks.—Then brain whirls—the hand becomes unsteady—the pocket empty—the home ones suffer—the eye looks red and tremulous, as if ashamed—ambition is drowned or poisoned. Pretty soon the poor fellow is unfit for business. He makes mistakes. He is sick, unable to work. He is not the man to be relied on. He leaves his place, and in time finds a poorer one. Then he feels blue—drinks still more—his family suffers—he leaves his place again, and at last he dies a wretch.—But it is social!

We believe a man has a right to kill himself suddenly or by slow poison. It may be none of our business in the abstract, yet we are sorry to see men fooling themselves away, dying like weeds in a gutter, when they might be men, upright, healthy, loved, and useful; of benefit to themselves and others. And this is why we write against intemperance. Health is too precious to be wasted. Manhood is too noble to be thrown into the gutter. Life is too sweet to be drugged with poisons now compounded and sold as liquors. To drink poison may be social, but it costs too much for us or for any man of sense who loves himself or others. Who of our readers dare think of this matter, and act as their better judgment shall dictate?

The Duties of a Mother.

She should be firm, gentle, kind; always ready to attend to her child.

She should never laugh at him, at what he does that is cunning—never allow him to think of his looks, except to be neat and clean in all his habits.

She should teach him to obey a look, to respect those older than himself.—She should never make a command without seeing that it is performed in the right manner.

Never speak of a child's faults or foibles, or remarks before him; it is a sure way to spoil a child.

Never reprove a child while excited, nor let your voice be raised when correcting him. Strive to inspire love, not dread—respect, not fear.

Teach your child to wait upon himself; to put away a thing when done with it. But do not forget that you were once a child. The griefs of little ones are too often neglected—they are great for them. Bear patiently with them, and never in any way rouse their anger if it can be avoided.

Duties of a Wife and Housekeeper.—Your first and highest duty is to make home happy for your husband, and how to make it should be your constant study.

Be always ready to receive him when he enters the house—yourself dressed neatly, the house in order, the meal ready.

Never complain or fret; but if anything troubles you, ask advice in a cheerful tone—not a woe-begone, abused one, as if life's trials had all been dealt to you, and everybody else was comparatively happy.

To make home happy, let the house wear a cheerful look and the meal be inviting. This will require no little care and experience. Be frugal and neat.

Be ever ready to oblige him, even if it put yourself to considerable inconvenience. He may have found in you many faults of which he never dreamed, and a willing spirit will aid materially in effacing them from his mind.

It is your duty to make and keep friends. It may promote your husband's prospects in life, and can do you no harm, whereas, it will be of much service to your children as they grow older, and very often be a source of consolation and happiness for yourself.

First Love.

It is one of the oldest points of difference between man and woman that woman has no first love. The long alphabet of her affections is without any distinct end or beginning; she mounts by insensible gradulations from dolls and kittens and pet brothers, to the zenith of passion, to descend by the same insensible gradulation from the zenith of passion through pet brothers to tabby-cats. There is no such event as a first kiss, forms in a boy's life to mark for the woman the transition from girlhood to the sudden maturity of passion; she has been kissing and purring and fondling and petting from her cradle, and she will pet and fondle and purr and kiss to her grave. Love, in the technical sense of the word, is with her little more than intensifying of her ordinary life. There is no new picture, but the colors are for the while hightened and the tone raised. Presently the vividness of color will fade again, and the cool grays lower the tone, and the passion of life will have died away. But there will be no definite movement at which one could fairly say that love came or went. A girl who is not whispering in a lover's ear will always say frankly enough that she never knew what it was not to be in love.

There is one obvious deduction which she forgets to draw—that there never can be a time when she can know what it is to be in love. Here and there, of course, a woman may be colder, or later in development, or more self-conscious, and may divide by more rigidly marked lines the phases of her life. But even then, if she be a woman at all, she can have no first love. Feeling, with woman, has no past, as it has no future. Every phase of her life begins with an act of oblivion.—Every love is a first love. "I never loved any one before," is said, and said truly, to a dozen loving ears in succession. "The first thing I should like to meet with in Paradise," said Lady Wortley Montague, "would be the river Lethe—the stream of Forgetfulness." But woman finds a little rivulet of Lethe at every stage of her heart's career. If she remembers the past at all, it is to offer it up as a burnt sacrifice to the deity of the present. When Cleopatra talked about Cæsar to Mark Anthony, she passed, no doubt, her fingers through her lover's hair, and wondered how she could have loved on such a head so low as the Dictator. Had he succeeded in charming Octavius, she would have wondered equally at her infatuation for such an ne'er-do-well as Anthony. And so it is no wonder that a woman's first love, even if she realizes it at all, goes down in the general wreck of the past. But in man's life is a revolution. It is, in fact, the one thing that makes him a man.

The world of boyhood is strictly a world of boys. Sisters, aunts, cousins, mothers, are mixed up in the general crowd of barbarians that stand without the playground. There are few warmer or more poetic affections than the chivalrous friendship of school-fellows; there is no more truer or more genuine worship than a boy's worship of the hero of the scrimmage or the cricket-field. It is a fine world in itself, but it is wonderfully narrow and restricted world. Not a girl may peep over the pailings. Girls can't jump, or fag out, or swarm up a tree; they have nothing to talk about as boys talk; they never heard of that glorious swipe of Old Brown's; they are awful milk-sops; they cry and "tell mamma;" they are afraid of a governess and a cow. It is impossible to conceive a creature more utterly contemptible is a boy's eyes than a girl of his own age usually is. Then in some fatal moment comes the revolution.—The barrier of contempt goes down with a crash. The boy-world disappears. Brown, that god of the playground, is cast to the owls and to the bats. There is sudden coolness in the friendship that was to last from the school to the grave. Paper chases and the annual match with the "old fellow," cease to be the highest object of human interest. There is less excitement than there was last year when a great cheer welcoms the news that Mugby has got the Ireland.

The boy's life has become muddled and confused. The old existence is sheering off, and the new comes shyly, fitfully. It is only by a sort of compulsion that he will own that he is making all this "fuss" about a girl.—For the moment he rebels against the spell of that one little face, the witchery of that one little hand, he lingers on the border of this new country, from whence there is no return to the old playing-fields. He is shy, strange to this world of woman, and woman's talk and woman's ground, tumbles over foot-stools, and tangles itself in colored wools. The sturdiest arm that ever wielded bat, trembles at the touch of the tiny finger. The voice that rang out like a trumpet, among the tumult of foot-ball, bushes, and trembles and falters in saying half a dozen commonplace words. The old sense of mastery is gone. He knows that every chit in the nursery has found out his secret, and is laughing over it. He blushes, and a boy's blush is a hot, painful thing, when the sisterly heads bend together, and he hears them whispering what a fool he is. Yes, he is a fool, that is one thing which he feels quite certain about.—There is only one other thing which he feels even more certain about—that he is in love, and that has made a man of him.

☞ Danl. J. Morrell has our thanks for valuable public documents.

☞ The Harrisburg Telegraph, the Philadelphia Press, and other leading Republican papers, are pitching into the guerrillas at Harrisburg in good style. They had nothing to say last fall when prominent would-be Republicans were working to defeat the Republican nominees for the Legislature in this district.

☞ Last week several earnest Republicans from townships where guerrilla influence was the strongest at the last election called on us to thank us for our determined efforts to crush guerrillaism. Many deceived into bad company by the Orlady Programme, now see that they were working in the interest of a secret political faction instead of against one, and they promised never to be caught again opposing the election of party nominees.—The leading guerrillas who deceived and misled honest Republicans to oppose the regularly nominated ticket last fall will not be able to do the same thing a second time.

Attempt to Release the Peighital Murderers.

Our citizens were horrified on Saturday night last by the intelligence that attempt was about to be made to release Bohner and Bordenbourg, the murderers of the Poighital family. There were many rumors afloat, but the following particulars which we have gleaned from reliable sources may be relied on: Some time in the afternoon, a man by the name of Foust, who has been summoned as a witness from Altoona, went to the jail, and while there he received a note through the bars of the cell from Bordenbourg. It was written in German, which he can speak but cannot read. He gave the note to another witness from Altoona named Smith, who read it to him, when he understood it. The request in the note was that he (Foust) should go to the hardware store and procure a saw that would cut iron and an English file. He accordingly went to Wharton & Maguire's store, where he inquired for the articles, but Mr. Maguire suspecting something, would not give them to him. A gentleman, who was in the store at the time, also suspected something, and went to the Court House, where he found Sheriff Neely and told him his suspicions.—The Sheriff got a few men, went to the jail, and made a search of the persons of the prisoners, and found two case knives, which were sharpened to a point, and had guards on made of iron; the handles were covered with rags. With these weapons it is supposed the prisoners had intended killing the guard, Mr. Long, that night, when he would come to take them out to the back-yard, and if they were resisted, probably to kill the Sheriff and all who opposed them.

The man Foust, who received the note, was arrested on suspicion of trying to aid their escape, and lodged in jail. He says he didn't know what they wanted with the saw and file, and didn't intend bringing them. He is the father of the girl whom Gotleib Bohner was engaged, and says he had intended marrying his daughter the week of the murder, but was going away first to get some money from Germany.

Guerrillaism at Harrisburg.

Election of State Treasurer—Mackey the Republican Nominee defeated by the United vote of the Democrats and Fifteen Guerrilla Republicans.

W. H. Irwin, Republican, elected.

☞ HARRISBURG, Jan. 12.

The joint Treasurer Convention met at 12 o'clock, M.

First ballot—Mackey, 62; Irwin, 71; Daniel O. Barr, (regular) Democratic nominee,) 55; Bishop Simpson, 1; Henderson, 1; Shoemaker, 1.

Second ballot—Irwin, 66; (he receiving all the Democratic votes but Brobst and Beans,) Mackey, 63; Barr, 2; Shoemaker, 1.

Motion to adjourn. Lost—ayes 56, nays, 76.

Third ballot—Irwin, 70; Mackey, 61. On this ballot, Brobst, and Beans, (Dem.,) and Ames and Coray, (Rep.,) changed, the first two from Barr and the latter from Mackey to Irwin.

The defeat of the Republican nominee is another Democratic victory, but not with a Democratic candidate, as was the case in this county and Representative district last fall. The election of two Democratic members to the Legislature by the Democrats and the Cremer guerrilla faction was two of a help to defeat the Republican nominee for State Treasurer, and of course the guerrillas in this county will claim a share of the credit for "busting up" the Republican organization at Harrisburg. No doubt Cremer's guerrilla secret political clan will still claim to be the equals of any other Republicans in the district. They will have a happy time getting the Republican party to believe them even the equals of Democrats.

CHARGES AGAINST PAUL SCHOEPPE FROM GERMANY.—Prof. Gneist, of Berlin, Germany, makes the following charges against Dr. Schoeppe and his father:

Public opinion forms its judgment of guilt or innocence from general impressions. But this circumstance is also unfavorable for Paul Schoeppe, should he seek the assistance of his countrymen especially here in Berlin. Our court of jurors, some six or seven years ago, made the acquaintance of a certain Schoeppe as a most dangerous criminal and sentenced him for grand larceny and forgery to the penitentiary. (German papers assert that this Paul Schoeppe, who was thus convicted at Berlin, had been Secretary to Count Blankensee and robbed him of 27,000 thalers.) Christoin name, surname, age, and personal description agree fully with that of your Paul Schoeppe. His father was a country parson, enjoying the reputation of great piety, who, in the same case, was convicted of receiving stolen goods This statement seems to agree with the description of your Paul Schoeppe and his father. In our police records it is found that father and son emigrated to America The States Attorney, who prosecuted the case of our fosmer Paul Schoeppe, makes special mention of the fact that forgery of documents charged in your country agrees with the method which our P. Schoeppe was habitually employing. Our records here contain a series of such documents with well executed imitations of the handwriting of others. You will not blame public opinion if it presumes the identity of the two persons with tolerable certainty. I will send you a few of our local papers, from which you will perceive that though the people have taken an interest in Schoeppe, public opinion very soon turned away from him.

SUDDEN FRIGHT—A LADY DRIVEN INSANE.—A case of sudden or violent fright occurred in our neighboring town of Abingdon on Monday last, which should prove a sad and impressive warning to all who are partial in partial in indulging in practical jokes. It seems, from what we can learn, that on that day a party of boys, disguised by hideous masks and grotesque garments, called at the residence of an estimable lady, Mrs. George H. Marshal, in this place. They entered noiselessly at the back door, and succeeded in frightening an infant almost into convulsions Mrs. M. hearing the horrified scream of her child, immediately hastened to its assistance to shield and protect it from harm.—In hurrying to her child she suddenly encountered the masked figures and fell fainting to the floor. She was shortly afterward found by her friends and proper remedies were at once administered, but her revival only witnessed the horrifying fact that she was hopelessly insane. Up to this writing we regret to say that no lucid intervals have been developed, and the woman once a happy wife and a proud mother is now a raving maniac, bereft of reason and cowering in fright.

This sad affair has caused a deep feeling in Abingdon, and Mr. Marshall has the sympathy of the commity in his sudden and distressing bereavement. The boys who participated in this masquerade, which has brought so dire a gloom and sorrow upon a once happy household, realize the situation keenly, and are struck with sincere sorrow for the results of their reckless thoughtlessness. This is but another warning, in an already long and dreary catalogue, against practical joking and its inevitable results, and we trust it will be remembered for some time to come, in that locality at least. All right thinking people, it is to be hoped, will discourage any amusement which has for its object the mortification or fright of the victim upon whom it is inflicted.—Galesburg Ill., Free Press.

Mount Union Furnace.

MT. UNION, Huntingdon County, Pennsylvania.—On Tdursday at 5½ A. M., I found myself at Mount Union, a station on the Pennsylvania Railroad, a distance of 86 miles from our good city. After partaking of a hearty breakfast at the hotel, we started for our destination, the Matilda Anthricite Furnace, the curling smoke of which indicated the location about three-fourths of a mile from the town; and we propose giving you a short description of it. The furnace was originally used for making charcoal iron. In the year 1867, Martin Crube, of Lancaster county became one of the proprietors, and manager, and under his regime, the old charcoal gave place to a modern anthracite. Of the construction, principle of hot oven, etc., we have not the time to speak.

We can only add that the furnace is a model in its arrangements and complete in all its details, and its iron has an established reputation as A No. 1. The grounds connected with the furnace property comprise 8,500 acres, which are valuable chiefly for the great deposit of iron ore, limestone and large quantity of woodlands, the wood of which is only fitted for charcoal purposes. The ores of Huntingdon county are both fossil and rock, and vary in color from a brownish red to a chocolate. This ore is especially of the red fossil, together with a strata of the brown ore, at a distance of a dozen yards from the tunnel head of the furnace. With lantern in hand, we enter the drift No. 1. This is a gangway leading some 400 yards into the hill.

On the upper side the miners are busy, drifting deeper, still deeper, and others are at work loading the iron ore into cars and taking to the furnace. From the rooms of this drift about 40,000 tons of ore have been taken. The vein is about thirty inches thick and ontends into the hills at an angle of about 45 degrees. No. 2 drift is on the same slope of the hill, ninety feet lower down. This drift is also being improved and large quantities of ore are being taken from it. No 3 is the last drift on the water line and the deeper the shafts are driven the greater the extent of the ore.

J P Lesley, Professor of Mining University of Pennsylvania, estimates the amount of ore, from the present indications ane developments, at not less than a half million tons. Prof H S Orborn, LL D of Easton, Pennsylvania gives the following analysis of the iron ore of Matilda Furnace, near Jack's Narrows, Huntingdon county, in his "Metallurgy of Iron and Steel:"

Proxide of iron	44,07
Silicia and insoluble matter	52,33
Metallic iron	30,84

This is for the brown fossil under the ground. Of the reddish brown, or what is generally known as the croppings out at the top of the hill,

Peroxide of iron	73,76
Silicia and insoluble matter	13,04
Metallic iron	52,33

I give the above analysis, as they may be interesting data for our iron manufacturers. There are many points of interest that we would desire to speak of, but space will not allow. Tomorrow, accompanied by Levi Myers, Esq, we promise taking a trip across the mountains to Rock Hill furnace, and if we have time, will send you a few notes.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

FATAL ACCIDENT—About half past five o'clock one morning last week, as Mr. David Hunter, an old man some seventy years of age, and an employe at the Birmingham Zinc Works, was on his way from his home at Ironsville to work, was struck by a locomotive of one of the through freight trains, near the Ironsville bridge on the Pennsylvania railroad, and so severely injured that he has since died. It appears that he seen a train coming toward him on the track which he was walking, when he stepped to the other, on which there was a train also, but he did not see or hear it, owing to the darkness of the morning and the noise of the other train. He was dragged some distance by the engine, breaking one arm, his jaws and otherwise injuring him.

He had a lantern in his hand which led the engineer to believe that it was the watchman, who was generally in that neighborhood about that time in the morning and did not sound an alarm for him until it was too late.

TRIAL OF A. H. CREWITT

FOR THE MURDER OF

MILES. HAMPSON.

In Huntingdon, October 25th, 1869.

"NOT GUILTY."

On Tuesday morning at quarter of eleven o'clock, after much challenging, the following named gentlemen were chosen as the jury:

William Shinne, James B. Carothers, Michael Stair, Henry Davis, Enoch Isenberg, Alexander Rouse, John Silverthorn, Edward Cook, William H. Stevens, William Enyeart, William Withington, Michael Householder.

District Attorney Lytle, aided by R. B. Petrekin and Wm. H. Woods, Esqrs., represented the Commonwealth, and the prisoner was defended by Messrs. Speer, M'Murtrie, Cremer, and P. M. Lytle.

The District Attorney opened the case for the Commonwealth, by defining the nature of the crime of murder as expressed by the Common Law, and by the Statutes of Pennsylvania, with a history of the occurrence, and recapitulation of the evidence by which it was intended to affix the guilt of the prisoner.

J. Simpson Africa was the first witness called, who exhibited and explained to the jury a plot of the store-room, where the event occurred.

Levi Hatfield.—This witness testified that he went with Hampson to Wharton & Maguire's store on the night of the 25th of Oct, Hampson said he wanted some breakfast, went in and got it from Crewitt, who went from weigh-scales at the right hand side of lower counter to the money drawer at show case, and gave him change there. Hampson then started down the aisle to back door, and called witness to come out with him. Hampson opened the door, and went out, witness next, and Crewitt closed the door. As Hampson stepped off the step on to the ground, Crewitt stepped on the lower step, and as Hampson turned around, Crewitt struck him and Hampson fell fair on the brow of his back. Witness picked him up and took him up the steps, Crewitt ahead, who laid his hand on the knob of the door and remarked, "I'll settle you, you son-of-a-b—h." Witness took him into the store, when Crewitt looked at cut and said, "I struck him with my fist, as he did that when he fell." He took Hampson to Dr. Weistling's but Dr. not being in took him to Dr. Brumbaugh's, who dressed the wound and said the skull was fractured. Then fetched him to Franklin House, where Hampson washed his face. From there they went to Jacobs' saloon. Were in there a few minutes, when two gentlemen took Hampson out. Witness saw him no more till Wednesday when in bed. Hampson had a cap on that night, but lost it outside, Crewitt fetched Hampson's cap over to Dr. Weistling's and got his hat. There was a hole in the cap over the wound.

Cross-examined by R. M. Speer.—Live in Portstown; am a flagman on freight train running between Huntingdon and Harrisburg. Was in town on Monday night. Knew Hampson about a year. He boarded at the Jackson House, in this town. Came from Jacobs'—a saloon under ground, opposite the Exchange Hotel. Hampson took a glass of cider before he left. He had a long, black coat on that reached to his knees. Jacobs told him to be sure and get shot. Hampson went into store first and I followed and stood at the show case. Saw Crewitt pour shot out, but don't know how he came from the shot box into the aisle. He had money in the left hand, and nothing in the other. As Hampson was going to back door, he said, "Hatfield, come out here." Witness did'nt know what he wanted with him, and it never struck him that Hampson wanted to whip Crewitt. I would'nt have let him. Hampson reached door first and opened with right hand; Crewitt was at the door; were out five or eight minutes. Crewitt struck him as soon as he got on the step; saw him give the lick, saw no weapon; if he had had a weapon in his hand I might have seen it. A light shone through the back door; it has a window in it; saw no hammer in Crewitt's hand during the 5 or 8 minutes he stood there.

Adjourned till 2 P. M.

Levi Hatfield,—Stated that he saw either Wharton or Maguire at the back door after the fight, saw Dan. Pope sitting on the left counter reading a newspaper, when I first came, and think he was sitting there when I went out; heard no person ask Crewitt what he struck him with. Met Geo. Nash first one after going out of the store; saw six or eight others at the doctor's; it appears to me Crewitt looked at Hampson's head at the office; Hampson ran out of the office on to the pavement; wanting to fight somebody; I brought him in; he was excited; Sam Williamson and some more went along to Dr. Brumbaugh's office; all went to Franklin House; he took no drink there as I saw; I did'nt think he was so dangerous. Hampson was unconscious after he was struck; he was entirely conscious when he jumped up at the doctor's; (witness was shown cap, with the hole in it.) That was the cap Hampson had on and that was the hole; I didn't know it was Miff. Swoope's cap, I never, as I recollect, saw him with a cap on before.

Daniel Pope, sworn.—Saw Crewitt starting toward the back door, behind the counter on the east side, and when he got to the centre he picked up what he thought was a claw hammer; passed out the lower end of counter through the gate at the railing; all three at the back door; either Hampson or Hatfield opened it; they were out about a minute. I was standing at Wharton's desk. Hampson's head was bleeding when brought in. Wharton asked who hit him. Crewitt said, I hit him; Wharton asked him, what with; he said, with his fist.

Cross-examined.—It was from two to three feet from end of counter that Howard picked up the hammer, think with the left hand. Won't be positive it was a claw-hammer.

Dr. John McCulloch sworn.—Was in the store that evening, sitting near the stove.—They both passed down the main aisle, to the best of my knowledge, and went out the back door, not out more than a minute; Hampson came in after Crewitt bleeding profusely.

Cross-examined.—Had both in full view; Crewitt could'nt have been where Pope says he picked up a hammer.

James H. Boring.—Was in store on that evening; saw Hampson and Crewitt conversing in a low tone of voice at the scales; saw Howard open the back door and after Hampson and Hatfield went out he closed it. The two latter passed down the aisle, and my impression is Howard passed down along the counter; I remarked to Mr. Smucker, after they had passed out, "There is something up, that Howard was slipping something out for those fellows." When Crewitt was going out I thought I saw him having something in his left hand, either under his coat or between his arm and coat; they were out but a very short time; I looked out back window and saw Hatfield holding Hampson up, who had blood on his face; heard Howard say he had hit him with his fist, before Hampson was out of the store.

Cross-examined.—Am not positive as to how Howard went out; saw no weapon about him; it was merely an inference he had something there.

Isaac Long.—I was sitting on the end of the west counter, when Crewitt came out into the main aisle, and I pulled my feet back, so that he would'nt dirty his pants. Crewitt opened the door with his left hand. Hampson walked out, Hatfield followed, and Crewitt held door open. Howard passing out where he did could not have picked up the hammer where Pope said he did; saw nothing in his hand when he passed in front of me.

Cross-examined.—Asked Hatfield when he came in, what was wrong with Hampson; he said somebody hit him. Hampson had his sleeves rolled up when he came in from the back door.

John E. Smucker.—Crewitt said to Hampson, "if you don't keep your mouth shut, I will put you out of the store," or something to that effect. Corroborated what Boring remarked to him.

Wednesday Morning.

Dr. David P. Miller.—Am a physician in town. Witness stated that Drs. Thompson, Meales, Brumbaugh and himself were at the post mortem examination, on the evening of the 28th of October. He saw him before he died, and suffering pain. Opened the wound, inserted our fingers and found the skull fractured. They proposed to elevate the compressed bone, but thinking he would die in the operation, they desisted. After he was dead, we dissected the scalp and muscles of the head, and removed a piece of bone. The brain was congested and inflamed.—The piece of skull was produced and explained to the jury. The injury was sufficient to produce death, and I think it was the cause of his death.

Cross examined.—Went down on Wednesday evening at Mr. Eby's request, and merely looked at him, and did not open the wound, as I was not the attending physician. Told Mr. Eby that the young man required the best medical attendance he could have. If the bone had been elevated and the loose fragments removed, the patient would have stood a fair chance of recovery. When the patient's bone is compressed he becomes stupid. The usual treatment is to give the patient a mild diet.

John Miller, (colored.)—Live at the Exchange Hotel, saw Hampson about 7 o'clock on Tuesday morning standing between the water-closet and porch, at the rear of the hotel; he was blood all over; took him to second story, where he fainted, and I put him to bed. Did not see Mr. Long take him away.

Dr. G. W. Thompson.—Was taken to the Jackson House on the afternoon of the 28th. Went to Hampson's room, spoke to him, but he did not reply. I noticed a wound in the scalp; saw it was stitched and gave it no further attention. I said to Mr. Hunter that most any one should have known enough to make a cold application to the head. Met Drs. Meales and Miller as I was passing out, and returned with them. We retired to an adjoining room to consult, and returned to trepan after supper; found after supper sinking too rapidly, and abandoned the operation. Then had the post mortem examination. There is no question in regard to the wound causing his death.

Cross-examined,—Was not in when the stitches were cut. A fracture in that locality is in a great majority of cases fatal. Said he was in a very delicate situation, and made the remark that he was receiving no attention, in my opinion. The proper treatment, in my judgment, would have been to elevate the bone, remove the clotted blood, and applied cold applications. He then stated the symptoms of the depression of the brain, which he said, as a general rule, come in a few hours after the shock. It was an exception to the case for a man to have acted as Hampson did, after he was struck.

Dr. A. B. Brumbaugh: Found Hampson at my office on Monday night; washed his face, found cut in his scalp over the left side of the frontal bone, and examined it with a silver probe. As I was urged by those present, who appeared to be in a hurry, I closed the wound by introducing sutures, and after saying to me, "I'll see you in the morning," he left the office. I told him, "I must see you early in the morning." I waited an hour and a half on him in the morning, but he did'nt come. I saw him next on the evening of the 28th at the Jackson House. He then stated what occurred at the post mortem examination It was my opinion, at the time, that his death was caused by the extent of the injury.

Cross examined: Found about 10 or 12 at my office. Hampson wanted to tell me what had happened, but I would not hear him; considered him under the influence of liquor; there was nothing in his conduct that led me to think he had compression of the brain; observed no deadness or stupidity about his actions; there was no compression of the skull under the wound that night, when I struck it with the probe; I struck the bone, and there was no depression under the cut; he went out unaided. Was asked on Wednesday evening, I think, by defendant to see patient, but replied, another physician was attending him.

Re-direct: I felt no depression that night. When I did find it, it was not under the cut; I made no further examination that night because there was nothing to indicate further injury, and because they were in haste to get away.

Dr. J. J. Meals: Reside in Mill Creek; left there on noon train on Thursday; Mr. Eby invited me to come and see patient; met Mr. Eby again about 3 o'clock; he told me that I should go and see Hampson again, with Dr. Miller. We went. Dr. Miller opened the stitches; they had no break in them. Corroborates the statements made by Drs. Miller and Thompson.

Cross examined: I did not see that any effort had been made to relieve inflammation. Never met a case of this kind where patient acted as Hampson did. Patient very seldom recovers from a comatose condition, and get able to walk about afterward.

Dr. Burkhart: Reside in town; saw Hampson on evening of the 26th at Jackson House in rather a critical condition; had no much time to give attention, and ordered a cold application and an anodyne; called on Wednesday about noon, and found him in rather a sinking condition; on Wednesday evening told Mr. Eby and two other gentlemen that the case was a critical one, with little or no hopes; Mr. Eby and Mr. Hunter called at my office on Thursday noon, and stated they would get or were getting another physician; saw Hampson on Thursday morning; there was no break in the stitches.

Cross-examined: Sam. Williamson came for me on Tuesday evening about half-past 5 o'clock; examined the wound by feeling with my finger, and discovered a compound fracture; ordered Mr. Williamson to give the cold application; I gave him morphia; it was hardly safe to cut the stitches because there was congestion of the brain; told Mr. Williamson he had better get some other physician, as I could'nt attend to it; wasn't sent for on Wednesday evening, when I ordered a new application; I graduated partly in '61–'62 and '65 at the Eclectic College, Phil'a.

William Long: I keep the Jackson House, Hampson was brought there on Monday night, and taken to his room; saw him at half past five next morning in the office, lying on a settee; heard him moaning in his room, and asked him if I could do anything; he said "It was not worth while doing anything." Witness then stated that while in the office the next morning he took several drinks of water, went out, came in again, laid down again, took several more drinks of water, got his cap, and went down stairs to bar-room; he next learned he had fainted at the Exchange Hotel, about 7 or 8 o'clock; he was brought to my house about 10 o'clock; on Tuesday morning; I put him to bed.

Dr. Miller was called and stated that the wound was a V shape; that he cut the stitches on Thursday evening, and that the scalp wound was a little in front of the fracture; not over the part depressed.

Commonwealth rested, and Stewart McMurtrie, Esq., stated to the jury what was to be proven by the defence.

Henry W. Fisher: My business at Wharton & Maguire's store in the evening is to rid up. He then stated that began at the back part of the east counter, and took off a lot of brass kettles and put them under the counter, and also some smoothing irons; there is a shelf under the counter raised about 3 inches from the floor; handled everything but some lead under middle section of counter; there were no hammers there; am positive; after Crewitt made the change, he came down behind the counter, placed one hand on my shoulder and one on the counter, and went out the main aisle; going out the way he did he could not have picked up the weapon Pope said he did; am positive as to how Howard went out; am positive there was no hammer under that part of the counter that night; he could have nothing in either hand when he went out as had one on my shoulder and the other on the counter; there was a yellow pine plank lying at the back of the store, which I had cut in two, eight feet long, about 9 inches wide, about 2 inches thick; it laid about south from the step; saw blood on the plank the next evening; there is glass lying in the yard also.

Cross-examined by R. B. Petrikin; A stone is sticking up near the corner of the cellar door; saw blood nowhere except on that plank, near the corner; the corner of the plank was about four feet from the step; Crewitt stepped over me and passed out the opening; claw-hammers are right behind the scales.

John A. Maguire; Am a member of the firm of Wharton & Maguire; was selling a pocket-knife to John Johnson when Hampson and Hatfield entered the store; directed Crewitt to get Hampson the shot; saw Crewitt coming to the opening next the front door, when he went to get the change; he had nothing in his hand as I saw; I was about four feet from him; he passed me and Fisher, came out the middle opening and passed out through the middle aisle; passing out he did not have picked up anything as Pope says he did; never kept hammers under that counter; Howard had not been in that part of the counter from the time I directed him to get the shot; I was writing at the corner desk when they came in; Crewitt came in first and left the door open behind him; he said "I want somebody to go out and take that fellow away;" I asked him what was the matter, he said: "Hampson had called him out to whip him, and he had struck him and knocked him down; he had nothing in his hand when he came in.

Cross Examined.—Crewitt went up behind the west counter to front door, and then passed over to the east counter to make change; keep hammers on the shelf behind the west counter, a short distance from the shot box; claw-hammers are there; can't say who opened the rear door, nor who went out first.

Thursday Morning.

James Kelley.—Was at Dr. Weistling's office after the fight; Hampson was sitting on a lounge when I went in; Dil Strickler came up on to the door from the street; Hampson saw him and said "you son of a b—h;" Strickler went out in the street and Hampson went down on the pavement after him; at a glance Hampson might have taken him for Howard.

Miles McNeil.—I am Prothonotary for this county; stated he had been up to Dr. Weistling's office late in the evening, and started home after ten o'clock, and when he came near Exchange hotel, saw a fuss at Jacob's corner; stopped at hotel and heard some one say, "Pitch in, Miles, G—d—n it, pitch in;" heard Hampson's voice, who said, "You are a G—d d—n son of a b—h;" I thought there was a fight going on; heard the noise about a square to my house and still heard it when I went in; pretty positive that the train had gone down.

Cross-examened; When I was on main street the 10 o'clock train passed down; might have been 15, 20 or 45 minutes on main street after it went down.

David Rahm; Am engaged in hauling wagon; saw plank on the morning after the fight lying between the back door and platform of warehouse in the rear of the store; saw blood about as big as my hand on the top of it, about a foot from the west end of it; saw a little blood on ground at the foot of the steps.

Dr. R. R. Weistling; Was assistant surgeon in the U. S. service two years and nine months; a person could be struck and fall in front; he explained the symptoms of depression of the brain, and cited authorities to prove his theory; heard Dr Brumbaugh's testimony, and don't think Hampson gave one indication of depression of the brain; I was called by Crewitt to tend Hampson, and went down with him on Thursday evening; I didn't attend him because he was in the hands of other physicians.

Cross-examined; Crewitt didn't tell me the man was dying; he wanted me to see his condition; nothing was said about hitting him; I never saw a man struck in the head with a hammer; the way a man falls depends somewhat on the center of gravitation: the fragments in the wound, if loose, would be forced in without removing the stitches; one piece is depressed more than the other and there might have been two blows; insensibility would follow such a wound as that; I know of no exception; if a man in a fight would fall backwards it would have a tendency to throw the lips of the wound together without breaking the stitches.

Dr. G. B. Hotchkin; I spent eighteen years in the study and practice of medicine; have treated fractures in nearly all parts of the body; had over 500 patients at one time in the army; Hampson exhibited no symptoms of depression of the brain the time Dr. Brumbaugh saw him; the symptoms manifest themselves immediately after the injury; I never saw, read or heard of any case where a man acted as Hampson did with such a compression; I believe the bone was not in its present condition when he was in Dr. Brumbaugh's office.

Theo. H. Cremer, Esq; I am uncle to defendant by marriage; was at inquest held by 'Squire Swoope for the purpose of hearing testimony; took down the particular part of testimony; Pope located himself within the office inside the railing; he never said anything about changing from that position; he said he was inside of railing where alleged he saw Crewitt pick up a hammer; I went the same night to the store, and looked to see where Pope said he got the hammer, and he couldn't have seen him; I heard Boring's testimony; he said very distinctly there that Howard had nothing in his hand when he went out; he is the witness who testified here that he saw Howard concealing something; he said not a word of that kind there; he was asked several times, but replied very distinctly that he had nothing in his hand; I went to the yard back of Wharton & Maguire's store and saw plank with blood on, which had been taken to the platform; the blood was about one foot and a half from the end.

Cross examined: I asked no questions; don't think question was put to Pope as to where he was standing when he saw Crewitt pick up the hammer; Boring didn't say a word about Crewitt concealing something; witness read Boring's and Pope's testimony before inquest.

R. A. Orbison: Saw Hampson on Monday evening about quarter of 7 at billiard saloon, above Jacobs' drinking saloon; he had on a hat.

Cross examined: He had just come up from a saloon down stairs; I recollect he always wore a hat; I noticed he had a long black coat on.

Thos. N. Colder: Knew Dr. Burkhart; acquainted with him at Harrisburg; saw him keeping bar there at the City Hotel, inside of three years.

Rev. G. W. Zahniser: Have lived in town 10 or 11 years; think I have known deft. since I came to town; am a frequent visitor to his house; I never heard anything spoken against his character as a quiet, peaceable and orderly young man.

Rev. Thos. Barnhart: Lived here 3 years; left last March; was Presiding Elder; am quite well acquainted with deft; his character was good as far as I know.

Kennedy M King: I was upon the inquest held at Jackson House; I asked most of the questions there; Danl. Pope was examined before me as a witness; he first said he was at or near the stove, after coming in to the store, reading a newspaper; he said he was not there all the time but went to the desk to speak to Mr. Wharton; I think he said he was at Wharton's desk when they came in, and they passed right on through; I asked him if he heard any conversation between them that indicated ill feeling; he said not; Mr. Boring was examined before me as a witness; I asked him if he heard any conversation that would lead him to suppose that they were excited or angry; I understood him to say he did not; I asked him if he was in a position that he could see whether Mr. Crewitt had a weapon in his hand; he said that he did not see him have any; he said he saw nothing at all concealed in Crewitt's hand.

Cross-examined: I didn't ask Boring whether Crewitt had anything concealed under his coat.

Sheriff Neely: Was at the Jackson House when Hampson died; from there went to Wharton & Maguire's store; walked in and Howard said, "Have you a warrant for me?" I tapped him on the shoulder and said, "Howard, came along;" went to Speer's office; left him there and went to 'Squire Johnston's and got warrant; I knew that a warrant was going to be issued that evening; he showed no resistance.

Cross-examined: I went to Howard as an officer of the peace; I thought he would be safe with me.

Thirty-eight witnesses were then called and sworn, who testified in substance that defendant had a good character for peace, order and quiet.

Here defence rested.

Jesse Decker: Tend bar at Jackson House; put Hampson to bed between 10 and 11 o'clock on Monday night, before the 10 o'clock train went down; I took him to bed and undressed him.

Cross-examined: My attention was first called to this matter yesterday by Miles Hampson's brother in-law; Mr. Woods asked me this evening what time I took him to bed; he did'nt tell me what time to fix it; don't know what time the train went down; I had him undressed and in bed before the train went down; did'nt see him until next day nearly noon.

Daniel Hertzler: Saw Crewitt in Morrison House yard while I was carrying the corpse to the station; there was a funeral procession; Howard was smoking a segar at the time.

Cross-examined: He was standing in the yard; he was a silent spectator; he did not utter a word.

William Long: Was on inquest; I mind some of Mr. Boring's words there; I think he said he thought Hampson took something out and wanted to show it; he did not say he saw Howard concealing anything.

Isaac Crewitt: Am a brother of Howard; reside in Danville; was summoned home and got here on Thursday, and left on Saturday morning; Howard and I went to station, and from there to Morrison House, and waited till train came; Howard had a segar; he is an incessant smoker; he was unusually quiet, and in low spirits; I did'nt know the funeral was there, and did'nt think Howard did; I don't think he said anything but good-bye.

Cross-examined: I took train; at Mill Creek saw people going out, but knew nothing of the funeral until somebody related the circumstance.

The evidence closed at 6:20 on Thursday evening, when Court adjourned until next morning.

Friday Morning.

A jury was empannelled to try the case of Commonwealth vs. Bohner and Bordenburg. W. H. Woods, Esq., attorney for Plaintiff, occupied the balance of the morning in his arguments, and was followed in the afternoon by P. M. Lytle, and R. M. Speer, Esqs., attorneys for def'ts. On account of the latter becoming hoarse, court was adjourned at half past five for an hour, when Mr. Speer not feeling any better, the court was adjourned until the next day.

The defendant's counsel argued the following proposition of facts:

1st. That Miles Hampson went to the store that night for the purpose of having a fight with Crewitt. That Hatfield went with him as his butty and backer.

3d. That no weapon was used by the defendant.

3d. That if Hampson died from the fracture of the skull, as the skull now appears, and not from mal-treatment, the fracture was not made by Crewitt.

4th. That Hampson induced Crewitt to go out of the store for the concealed purpose of whipping him—that Hatfield was in concert with him—aiding, assisting and abetting—and that Crewitt struck Hampson, using no weapon, as the only means to prevent Hampson from striking him; and, therefore, he was justified in what he did—no matter what the consequences were; and should be acquitted.

On Saturday morning Mr. Speer spoke till twenty minutes past 11, when R. B. Petrikon, attorney for plaintiff, argued for an hour, and after dinner spoke until ten minutes of 5.—The Judge's charge occupied one hour and a-half in delivery; when the court adjourned and the Jury retired.

"Not Guilty."

The jury returned after deliberating an hour and a-half. The court room was filled with people, and on the jury responding "not guilty" to the question by the Clerk, a shout went up, and the prisoner and his brother Andrew, who was sitting beside him, fell to the floor as if shocked, and remained insensible for some minutes. Thus ended one of the most interesting and exciting trials that has ever occurred in Huntingdon.

A Foundling.

On Saturday evening last a woman stopped off the Cincinnati Express train, east, having in her hand a basket, and, a child in her arms. She went to a hotel, and engaged a room where she washed and dressed the child. A short time afterward she inquired for the residence of Dr. E. J. Greene, and on being told that he resided at his father-in-law, she went in company with a colored boy to the house. She carried the baby in her arms, and the boy carried the basket. On reaching the house, the woman put the child in the basket, rapped on the door, and left it. The inmates came to the door, and seeing the basket, opened it, and to their surprise found a beautiful and well-dressed infant, which was not more than three weeks old, and was still living. A note was also found in the basket, that advised the gentleman to keep the child for several years, and he would be well rewarded for his kindness. We believe it is the intention of the gentleman to do as requested, (though there were several other parties who wanted it,) and we can assure the unknown and incomprehensible mother that it will be well cared for.

The following is the substance of the note, which was addressed to Dr. E. J. and Nannie Greene, and was written in a neat lady's handwriting:

"This is not an illegitimate child, but comes to you pure and spotless. Circumstances over which I have no control compels me to part with it. It was born on Christmas day, and its name is Minnie Bell. Raise it up a Methodist and Good Templar. You will be rewarded in after years for your charity. May God deal with you as you deal with my child."

Agricultural Meeting.

Graffius Miller, Esq, was elected President for the ensuing year. R. McDivitt and M. S. Lytle, Recording Secretaries, Dr. R. A. Miller, corresponding Secretary; George Jackson, Treasurer, and T. H. Cremer Librarian.

The present lists of Vice Presidents were continued, James M. Stevens of Petersburg, Jackson Enyert of Hopewell, Isaac Swoope of Shirley, Peter M. Bare, Mt. Union, Harry Cook, B. Top, and M. Rex, of Mapleton, having been elected to fill vacancies.

Wm. B. Zeigler, John A Whittaker, Jacob Miller, David Hare, and John S. Warfel, were appointed a Committee for the purpose of securing a suitable piece of ground for the holding of agricultural exhibitions, with authority to act in concert with any other association which may be in existence hereafter, and to report at the next meeting of the Society.

Trial of the Peighal Murderers.

Gotleib Bohner and Albert Van Bordenbourg, were arraigned for trial on Friday morning last, the 14th inst. They plead not guilty. The following are the names of the jurymen impannelled: Nathan Greenland, John Miller, Solas Gibbony, David Henderson, James Horning, M. L Shaffner, Jacob H. Isett, J. D. Appleby, David Jones, Edward Couch, Ralph Crotzley, Wm. Lincoln. The prisoners were brought into Court at quarter of eleven on Monday morning last. Mr. Speer, asked for other assistance to Mr. S. T. Brown, as he was unable on account of hoarseness to act as counsel for defendants K. Allen Lovell, Esq, was thereupon appointed. The Attorney's for prosecution are the Dist Attorney M. S. Lytle, and P. M. Lytle and R. Bruce Petrikon.

The case was opened by P. M. Lytle, and the hearing of testimony is now in progress.

I WISH I WAS A PRINTER.

I wish I was a printer,
I really do indeed,
It seems to me that printers
Get everything they need,
[Except money!]

They get the largest and the best
Of everything that grows,
And gets free into circuses,
And other kind of shows.
[By giving an equivalent?]

The biggest bug will speak to them,
No matter how they dress,
A shabby coat is nothing
If they own a printing press.
[Policy]

As ladies' faire they're almost hugged,
By pretty girls who know
That they will crack up everything
The ladies have to show.
[Of course.]

And thus they get a "blow out" free
At every party feed—
The reason is because they write,
And other people read.
[That's so!]

The Lawyers and the Cats.

Two Arkansas lawyers were domesticated in the rude hotel of a country town. The hotel was crowded, and the room allotted to our two heroes was also occupied by six or eight others. Shake-down beds, enough to accomodate the guests, were disposed about the room, against the four walls having an open space in the centre of the apartment.

Judge Clay lay with his head to the north, on one side, and Judge Thomas lay with his head to the south, on the other side of the room. So far as that room was concerned, it might be said that their heads represented the north and south poles, respectively.

All the other beds in the room were occupied. The central part of the room was deemed neutral ground, in which the occupants of the different ends had equal rights. Here, in picturesque confusion, lay the boots, hats coats, and breeches of all the sleepers. There were windows, and though the door was open, there being no moon, the night was very dark in that room.

The willy lawyers, who had been opposing counsel in a case tried in the town court that day, and had opposed each other with the contumacy of wild pigs, were now the very incarnation of meekness, for when the hungry swarm of mosquitoes settled down and hit them on the one cheek, they slowly turned the other to be bitten also.

But hush! hark!

A deep sound strikes the ear like a ri-ing knell!

"Me-ow-ow!"

Judges Clark and Thomas were wide awake, and sitting bolt upright, in an instant.

Again the startling cry!

"Ye-ow, yeow!"

"There's a d—d cat!" whipered Clark.

"Scat, you!" hissed Thomas.

Cat paid no attention to these demonstrations, but gave another yowl.

"Oh, Lord!" cried Clark, "I can't stand this! Where is she Thomas?"

"On your side of the room somewhere," replied Thomas.

"No, she's on your side," said Clark

"Ye-ow-ow-ow!"

"There, I told you she was on your side," they both exclaimed in one breath.

And still the "yowl" went on.

The idea now entered the heads of both the lawyers that by the exercise of certain strategy they might be enabled to execute a certain flank movement on the cat, and totally demoralize him. Practically each determined to fix a motion to gunsh the cat's attachment for that room.

Each kept his plan to himself, and in the dark, unable to see each other, prepared for action.

Strange as it may appear, it is nevertheless true, that the same plan suggested itself to both. In words, the plan would be about as follows:

The fowler is evidently looking and calling for another cat, with whom he has made an appointment. I will imitate a cat, and this cat will think t'other cat's around. This cat will will come toward me, and when he shall have arrived within reach, I'll blaze away with anything I can get hold of, and knock the mew sic out of him.

So each of the portly judges, noiselessly as cream comes to the surface of the milk, blasted himself onto his hands and knees, and, hippopotamus fashion advanced to the neutral ground occupying the centre of the room.

Arrived there, Judge Clarke selected a boot-jack, and Judge Thomas a heavy cow-hide boot, from the heap, and settled themselves down to the work.

Clark tightened his grip on the boot jack, and throwing up his head, gave vent to a prolonged and unearthly "Ye-ow-ow!" that would have reflected credit upon ten of the largest kind of cats.

"Aha," thought Thomas, who was not six feet away "he's immediately close around. Now I'll inveigle him!" and he gave the regular dark night call of a feminine cat.

Each of the judges now advanced a little closer, and Clark produced a questioning "Ow! ow?"

Thomas answered by a reassuring "Pur-ow! pur-ow!" and they advanced a little more.

They were now within easy reach, and each imaging the cat had but a moment more to live, whaled away, the one with his boot, the other with his boot jack.

The boot took Clark square in the mouth, demolishing his teeth, and the boot-jack came down on Thomas' bald head just as he was in the midst of a triumphant "Ye-ow!"

When lights were brought the cat had disappeared, but the cat-as-trophe was in opposite corners of the room with heels in the air, swearing blue streaks.

Happiness in Marriage.

KINDLY WORDS FOR THE HOME CIRCLE.

In his discourse in the Spring Street Presbyterian Church, on Sunday, Rev. Dr. Aikman thus delivered a "Lesson to Wives:" "The Bible understands human nature full as well as we of this late generation do. What is required of the wife is that she shall love her husband supremely, which cannot be done unless she respects and puts her entire confidence in him. So far as other men are concerned, she must hold him supremely above them in her mind." The preacher then considered the various minor duties of the wife towards her husband. He touched upon the too common practice of making confidants of some particular friends, when the husband alone should be her confidant. There is also a tendency in the household after marriage to neglect to keep up those evidences of affection which first drew husband and wife together. Greater dilligence is necessary to keep their love warm when they have entered upon the realities of life than when they lived in dreams of courtship and happiness.—Among the things to be preserved from first to last is that modesty, grace and purity which first won the husband.—Then, there are all the personal attractions to be continued. Nothing is more coveted by a hightoned man than a charming wife—one who converses with him intelligently, and appear to advantage in society; one who always looks beautiful in her happy face, and attractive in person; one who is not slovenly; who keeps the home neat and cheerful; who is full of delicate attentions, and is absorbed in her husband's and her family's interests. All these charms can be maintained by the wife through life by a little attention every day to what she knows will please her husband.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

GENERAL WOOL'S ESTATE.—The evening before the veteran General was stricken down with the illness that closed his eventful career, he made a most interesting statement to the editor of the Troy Whig, which conveys a practical lesson, and shows how easy it is to become rich after obtaining the first dollar, if one is prudent and economical. "I never made but $20,000 in my life!" said the General emphatically, "but I always kept that at good interest." On our expressing surprise, he went on to explain. It seems that at the close of the war 1812, the General found himself terribly wounded, but about even with the world in a pecuniary point of view. Shortly afterwards the Government sent him to the far South and West on a special mission connected with military affairs, and for five years he travelled over mountains, and through the almost trackless wilderness, and accomplished his difficult mission, as he always did, to the entire satisfaction of the Government. He had not drawn a dollar from the Treasury, except for actual expenses, and at the end of the five years the Government owed him $20,000, which was then paid. Here was the nucleus of his large fortune. General Wool was then about 35 years of age. He died at about the age of 88. Now let the reader take this $20,000, which, at compound interest, will nearly double every ten years, and in the fifty years intervening between the time of its receipt and the General's death, he will find that it will amount to just about the General's estate, to wit, $640,000.
